

Information release

AWG Hudson Coastal Trials to take place in Salluit

June 19 2013, Kuujjuaq (Québec). The Recreation Department of the Kativik Regional Government (KRG) is happy to announce that the Arctic Winter Games - Hudson Coastal Trials, will be taking place in Salluit, from July 12 to the 15th.

The KRG had postponed the trials, originally scheduled from May 3rd to the 6th, to give the Nunavik Regional Board of Health and Social Services (NRBHSS) the time to monitor and assess the tuberculosis situation in Salluit. In a news release issued earlier today, the NRBHSS stated that “the current situation does not require that the communities cancel social and sporting events that are so important for the overall well-being of the population”. Additional information regarding the tuberculosis situation in Salluit and across Nunavik can be found here.

The Hudson Coastal Trials will see more than 80 participants, each hoping to eventually secure one of the coveted spots for the 2014 Arctic Winter Games. This second and last round of trials follows the Ungava Coastal Trials that took place from April 26 to 29 in Kangiqsualujjuaq.
